ProCred Receives NCQA CR Accreditation in Credentialing

This Accreditation allows ProCred to provide delegated credentialing and primary source verification to its clients

[Redbank, New Jersey]: ProCred, a prominent medical provider enrollment company, today announced that it has received Certification from the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA) in Credentialing/Recredentialing (CR), a program that evaluates clinicians and practices that use teamwork and technology to deliver coordinated and patient-centered primary care.

The NCQA CR certification focuses on consumer protection and customer service improvement. This certification provides a framework for organizations, like ProCred, to implement industry best practices that help them accurately and efficiently credential and recredential health care professionals. Credentialing is the process of verifying healthcare practitioners credentials, ensuring clinical preparedness and patient safety.

"We are thrilled to announce this Credentialing/Recredentialing Certification," says Dr. Joseph Calabro, CEO of ProCred. "It was a lengthy process, but we feel this accreditation reflects our passion for improving efficiencies as well as protecting our clients and, in turn, their patients."

NCQA is a private, non-profit organization dedicated to improving health care quality. A Certification from the NCQA means that ProCred has a proven track record of quickly, efficiently and accurately credentialing medical providers. Clients can remain confident that ProCred is utilizing first-class processes in ensuring quality medical providers are caring for their patients.
